How to Teach How to Learn – Training for secondary school teachers

O2 the first phase was to develop the “How to Teach How to Learn” training material based on the outcome of O1. The O2 phase main aim was to give a methodological toolkit, “How to Teach How to Learn” training material, which helps teachers integrating the three skills (critical thinking, problem solving, managing own learning process) into different secondary school subjects lesson plan and latter into the school curriculum. The best 10 learning skills improvement methods and techniques of each pillars (critical thinking, problem solving and managing own learning process) were developed and elaborated by experts from the University of Pannonia (UP), Hungarian Institute for Educational Research and Development of Eszterházy Károly University (EKU) and National Institute for Education (SPU).

Short-term joint staff training event in Bratislava – July 2019

The “How to Teach How to Learn” training material gave the base of the 5-day Training Activity in Bratislava 2019 July. As the outcome of the training participants became familiar with their tasks in the next steps of the project. They got ready to the “teaching” of their colleagues at the beginning of the next academic year and had an idea on the mentoring of their participating colleagues in the implementation. During the training week teachers prepared lesson plans based on the three learning skills. They created a strategic plan to implement the methods, improving the learning skills in their school.
